EMERGENCY RELIEF HEAD SUGGESTS A 12-POINT PROGRAM

Eric H. Biddle Urges Payments in Cash, and Cash Only

LOAD IS DIMINISHING

We Now Stand at the Parting Of the Ways, He Says

HARRISBURG, Dec. 27.—(INS)—A program of planned social and economic order to assure security to all, the backbone of which would be a long-time relief program with payments in "cash, and cash only," was recommended for Pennsylvania today in the report of Eric H. Biddle, director of the State Emergency Relief Board, to Gov. Gifford Pinchot.

Outlining in detail the 14-month history of the board and its work, the report concluded with a 12-point program of recommendations for the future which it said "should be adopted not later than the regular session of the legislature in 1935."

Pointing out that the relief load is diminishing with the return to economic normalcy, the report bluntly stated:

"We stand today at the parting of the ways: in one direction lies breakdown and chaos—in the other a planned social and economic order, the first principle of which should be the assurance of security for all."

"The approved method of dealing with the ills of the social and economic system seems to have been to wait until a complete breakdown is at hand, whereupon a partial correction has been devised. The effect is disjointed legislative and social action; the preservation of institutions which have long outlived their usefulness."

"The establishment of a permanent relief administration should be developed on an entirely new foundation and as part of a complete program of social and economic legislation."

Recognizing the possibility of objection to the recommendations of cash relief, the report answered by saying:

"If there is any one left at this late date who would protest against cash relief as being a dote, let it be remembered that we are already giving a dote, whether it be in the form of relief orders for food or other necessities of life."

"Cash relief affords the family some opportunity for freedom and initiative and, as a matter of fact, has far less of the psychology of 'charity' than do the stereotyped orders for particular types of commodities."

The present form of organization, whereby the primary financial responsibility rests with the State was characterized as "admirably suited to present conditions." It was recommended, however that as quickly as municipal financial conditions improve, any long-time relief program that is established should bring back the local community as a more active participant in the Federal-State-local partnership.

Final authority and responsibility for the permanent system should be lodged with the State Board, the report said, although it recommended that local communities make a basic contribution toward its own unemployment relief expenditures and retain a large measure of control of local administration.

Introduction of civil service into the selection of personnel for the administration of relief and substitution of a civilian board appointed by the Governor for the present membership were recommended "to remove these offices entirely from the sphere of partisan politics." The board now consists of the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, Auditor General, State Treasurer and speaker of the House of Representatives.

Retention of unpaid civilian members of the county board, together with a paid executive responsible to the board, as the head of the local administrative unit was urged.

Turning to the present emergency system, the report recommended that with mass relief demands decreasing relief should be given on a budgetary deficiency basis, which would materially increase expenditures per family but not increase the total disbursement.

In this connection, statistical data in the report showed that the number of families on relief lists has decreased from 455,000 since May to 324,000 families in October.

Expenditures for 14 months totaled $83,837,904.95, of which $4.59 per cent, or $70,917,930.46, was for food.

PLAN CHARITY AFFAIR

Civil Works Program Goes On Despite Cold

Bristol is in the grip today of real winter weather. Low temperatures followed the snow storm of yesterday. Highway crews have been busy keeping the main arteries of traffic moving.

Those employed on Civil Works projects in this area are continuing the work of extending the borough water mains into Bristol township. The frost, it is reported, is not very deep, and trenches are being dug as usual.

Biting winds whipped snow that came with the winter's worst storm into drifts as the mercury sank to sub-zero marks, setting low records in many sections of Pennsylvania today.

Temperatures ranging from 10 below to 19 above zero prevailed throughout the state. Weather predictions today brought little comfort to other than western Pennsylvania residents. In that section, which was hit by the storm, the mercury was expected to soar. In central and eastern Pennsylvania zero temperatures were predicted for tonight indicating the freezing temperatures are sweeping eastward.

The State Highway Department sent record crews of 3700 men to work with nearly 1000 snow ploughs clearing drifted highways which impeded motor transportation throughout the state. All highways, except a few secondary roads were reported passable. Trains throughout the western section of the state were delayed by the violent winds which whirled the snow into firm drifts. Throughout the night the blizzard raged taking at least two lives as the mercury in western Pennsylvania fell below the zero mark. The temperature dropped to 10 below in the mountain region. Lows of 2 and 4 degrees below were recorded in Westmoreland county. The mercury in other places read: Carnegie, 4 below; Tarentum, 1 below; Pittsburgh, 1 below; Harrisburg, 11 above; Philadelphia, 19 above.

NEW YORK CITY, Dec. 27.—Poking its nose from beneath a 107 inch snowfall, the heaviest in seven years New York and the northeastern seaboard today were greeted with the announcement that more snow and cold are on the way after at least one day of clear weather.

Escaping the bitter sub-zero temperature which prevailed in the north-west and midwest states, the northeast section nevertheless felt stinging cold. The gale raged at a maximum of 30 miles an hour and swirled a blinding snow curtain over the metropolitan area's streets and highways, slowing down traffic, paralyzing air transportation and bringing ocean and coastwise ships activities to a temporary halt. Planes were grounded at all airports and it was not until the snow ceased late last night that an attempt was made to resume air mail operations by dispatching a westbound plane from Newark.

To an army of 32,000 unemployed, the snow brought a message of joy when they were called out to aid the regular city forces in clearing streets and highways.

A "mystery airplane" which hummed over New York for three hours at the height of the storm yesterday remained a mystery this morning. No airport in the metropolitan area reported a plane missing and no emergency landing of crafts were reported within a fifty mile radius.

ANNOUNCE CHANGES IN RIVER LIGHTHOUSES

Intensity of the Penn Manor Light Is To Be Increased

OTHER DETAILS GIVEN

In bulletin No. 29, from the office of the Commissioner of Lighthouses, some changes are announced for lighthouses along the Delaware river above Philadelphia. They are to be established about January 30, 1934, and are as follows:

Kinkora Range Rear Light will be occulting white every 3 seconds, light 2 seconds, eclipse 1 second, of 2,500 candlepower, 48 feet above water, on white post, 305 yards 49 degrees from present Penn Manor Light.

Newbold Range Rear Light will be occulting white every 3 seconds, light 2 seconds, eclipse 1 second, of 2,500 candlepower, 37 feet above water, on white post, 200 yards 274½ degrees from present Penn Manor Light.

Penn Manor Light—Characteristic of light to be changed and intensity of light increased to 2,500 candlepower; the light will then show occulting white every 2 seconds, light 1 second, eclipse 1 second; name to be changed to Kinkora Range Front Light and Newbold Range Front Light (front for both ranges); without change in location.

LEAGUE OF NATIONS FACES MANY REFORMS

Italy Demands Many Changes If She Remains A Member

TO REWRITE THE RULES

By Arno Bosch-Fleuret

PARIS, Dec. 27.—(INS)—The Fascist Grand Council has put up to the members of the League of Nations the very unpleasant duty of taking a look at their institutions and judging what it amounts to.

It takes a dictator to get away with such an ultimatum as Mussolini delivered through his Grand Council: "The continued collaboration of Italy with the League of Nations shall be conditioned upon the radical reform of the League in its constitution, organization and objectives, within the shortest possible time."

The moment was well-chosen, when the League feels the weakest, with Germany and Japan withdrawing this year and the absence of the United States and the Soviets becoming, in consequence, much more conspicuous.

To France and to the states created or enlarged following the World War it looks as if Italy were trying to shake their structure down on their heads. But they are not given much time for idle recrimination or speculation. That "shortest possible time" of Mussolini's is imperious.

Mussolini has, in fact, been sniffing at Geneva for a long time here. Here in Paris it was pretty well understood what Mussolini meant when he referred to the radical reform he desired in the League's constitution, organization and objectives, and the understanding has not led to greater tranquility of mind.

It is known here that Mussolini's first reform would be to rewrite the constitution of the League, cutting it out, and off from the Treaty of Versailles. The method of construction of the League as the center of a new Europe of the self-determination of peoples, carefully worked out and written into peace treaties, is looked upon by Mussolini now as out-of-date.

The League as the center of defense for the upholding of the peace treaties is, according to the Fascist viewpoint, a danger in the Europe of today. Let each peace treaty stand or fall on its own merits and not live on the artificial support of the League, sums up the Italian opinion.

Another reason for cutting the League off from the treaties, as the Italians see it, is the impossibility of getting either the Soviets or the United States into the League as it exists, and, for the same reason, it is hopeless to anticipate that Germany will ever come back. The League as it stands is to Nazi Germany simply a means of enforcement of the "dictat" of Versailles, becoming increasingly detestable to it.

What Mussolini wants next is even more disquieting to the upholders of the League as it exists, for he is aiming at the equality of all members before the League. In this he also voices a loud German sentiment. Neither believes in democracy, both favor hierarchy. That lay at the base of the Four-Power Pact, Mussolini not even referring to the League of Nations in his initial proposal and only accepting reference to it in order to induce the French to sign.

It is not very clearly seen here just how the big powers can induce the smaller members of the League to let them run the whole show (there has always been a hostility in the League on the part of the little fellows to letting the big ones have all the say), but it is presumed that Mussolini wishes to reform the Council into a smaller body

FOUR FIELD GOALS WIN FOR Y. M. A. TEAM

Eight Points Scored in Last 50 Seconds Of Playing

FINAL SCORE 46 TO 38

(By T. M. Juno)

Four field goals in the last fifty seconds of playing gave the Young Men's Association a 46-38 triumph over the Knight of Columbus last night on the Italian Mutual Aid basketball court. The winning double-deckers were evenly divided between "Toby" Lawrence and "Nellie" Green.

Going into the last minute of playing "Pankie" Fine had deadlocked the score at 38 all. On the top-off Lawrence passed to Green and in went a two-pointer. Following the next tap-off Green passed to Lawrence and the Y's were four points to the good. Before the minute was over the two brilliant forwards of the winning aggregation had alternated in passing the ball to each other to score another double-decker each.

The fray was one of the best played on the local floor this season. All during the game the lead was changing in see-saw fashion with neither club holding more than a four point lead at any stage of the match. In the third quarter when it looked as if the 1932 champions were going to make it a run-away affair, Lou Parker came through for the Caseys to score two wonderful field goals and then Corrigan added a duo of two-pointers which put the Knights four tallies in the lead.

The edge was short-lived because the Green-Lawrence-Fine combination began to function and three field goals by this trio sent the Y. M. A. into a 34-32 lead. Ennis deadlocked the score for the Caseys with a long shot which was followed by another one from the center of the court by McCafferty. This was followed by the brilliant climax of the fray.

"Pankie" Fine and Nelson Green were high scorers for the winners although most of the passing was done by "Toby" Lawrence who was acting as pivot man. For the losers, "Gunner" Corrigan was high with fourteen points followed by Lou Parker with eleven.

On Thursday night, the Third Ward team plays the Hibernians and St. Ann's meets the P. P. C. O.

PREPARING FOR CONGRESS
Washington, D. C., Dec. 27.—President Roosevelt plunged into a busy week of preparation today for the return of Congress. It reassembles next Wednesday for a session of undetermined length. If the White House and Democratic leaders have their way, it will be a short session devoted particularly to approval of the budget, voting additional billions of dollars to the furtherance of the recovery program and revision of the tax laws in the light of changed conditions since last June.

Neither President Roosevelt nor the Democratic leaders believe any broad legislative program is necessary, or desirable, at this time. Rather, they believe what the country needs is to proceed along the pathway already marked out by the existing legislation.

The President will submit two messages next week, the first dealing with the general state of the nation and the second with financial recommendations. Both are in state of preparation. The regular budget will call for approximately $2,600,000,000. Additional financing of the recovery program will call for some $3,500,000,000 more for the RFC, the PWA, the CWA and for continuation of outright Federal relief. It will be a $6,000,000,000 Congress.

The outlook is for a turbulent session, although overwhelming Democratic majorities in both houses assure complete administration control. The President will be subjected to more criticism in the new session than he encountered in the last, but it will be more vocal than threatening to his program.

Republican policy is to be determined next Tuesday, the day before the session. Senator McNary of Oregon, Republican leader of the Senate, has called a caucus for Tuesday to decide upon a program—or at least to discuss one. It is doubtful if there will be any cut and dried Republican program, if for no other reason than that the minority find themselves badly split. Almost half the Republican membership in the Senate for example, are inclined to go along with the administration in support of the Recovery measure.

DAUGHTER KILLS FATHER

San Diego, Cal., Dec. 27.—With a cry of vengeance on his lips, Ernest Turley, 46, U. S. Navy Reserve petty officer, died in the Navy Hospital today from gunshot wounds ascertained to be inflicted by his pretty 15-year-old daughter Mattie in a strange Arizona desert. Turley Board drama, Mattie, held under bond by Juvenile Court authorities, told officials she was commanded by a Oulja Board to "shoot father so that mother could marry a handsome young cowboy." Believing that he would recover, Turley said, "I am going back to Arizona to prosecute my daughter to the full extent of the law for her attempt to murder me."

Love for Pet Dog Cost Life of Ernest Spencer

DOYLESTOWN, Dec. 27.—Love for his pet dog cost the life of Ernest Spencer, 45, Hollisong, whose body was found in a ditch along the Buckingham Pike, near its intersection with the Mechanicville Road, yesterday.

Spencer spent Christmas Day at the home of F. L. Van Shuts, a brother-in-law, at 7209 Cresheim Road, Chestnut Hill. He and his wife were holiday visitors there.

Christmas night Spencer told his wife that he had forgotten to leave food for their dog and said he would return to Hollisong to feed the animal.

Boarding a trolley car at Chestnut Hill, he rode to Willow Grove, and from there was given a lift by Henry Newell, who was returning to his home here. Then Spencer started to walk to Hollisong, five miles distant.

Garfield Ware, of Jamison, who was visiting near here, discovered the body shortly after 1 o'clock. He told Trooper Elmer Lincoln, of Doylestown State Police, that he had heard a thump as an automobile passed the house where he was visiting about 10 minutes before he found the body.

Mrs. Spencer became hysterical when told of the death of her husband. Spencer, whose mother and brother live in Vienna, Austria, moved to Hollisong last April and was at the head of a movement to establish a New York colony there. He formerly resided in New York City.

Death was due to a compound fracture of the skull. The victim also suffered a broken right thigh.

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 27, 1933

DAD THE DAY AFTER

What is wrong with Dad all of a sudden? He is showing his age. He seems to be carrying a burden. His shoulders sag. His head droops. He is short of breath. He was not like that before Christmas!

No, this is not a case for a specialist. The burden he carries is neither mental nor physical. It is material. Examine the poor martyr closely—his pockets in particular.

What is that bulge in the right-hand pants pocket? A new knife and thick keyholder. The left pocket sags under the weight of a thick corkscrew and bottle opener.

Turn the vest pockets inside out and there will be found a pocket lighter, fingernail clipper and cigar cutter, and gold-mounted dental quill, not to mention two new pencil and pen sets, an address book and one of the new heavy watch chains.

From his coat one picks a tobacco pouch, pipe, billfold, cigarette case, diary. And from under the coat at the hip peeps out a new leather-bound flask.

Around his neck they have tied a heavy woolen scarf and a bright red necktie. In his breast pocket they have stuck an harmonizing handkerchief, and on his hands new gloves.

That is why father is heavy laden. They have trimmed him like a Christmas tree having previously trimmed him like a lamb at a Wall Street hearing. And when he begins indiscriminately giving gifts in gold and leather it will not be from pure generosity.

LOYALTY IN SERVICE

The character of the individual may be very largely gauged by the measure of loyalty he exercises toward the person or institution that provides him with employment. A real ingrate is the person who is disloyal to the one to whom he owes the obligation of service.

The test which may be applied to the individual is equally good when applied to a group of persons, organized to act as a unit. An act of unfairness is no less culpable because it is committed by a group rather than by an individual.

There are persons who feel under certain obligations to be loyal to an individual who is their employer, though they have no such feeling when their employer is a corporation. It is the same idea that rules the man who believes he is honest but would ride free on a public conveyance if he could.

Many manufacturers and other employers complain that they are paying the highest wages in the history of their business, but they say that production has not increased and that the quality of the work, if anything, has deteriorated.

It is plain that there is need of a return to the principle of "an honest day's work for an honest day's pay." Any person who takes wages without an effort to give adequate return should not profess to consider himself in the class of honest men.

If you can't be important, you can at least be righteous and feel just as superior.

It may be tragic to lose one's memory, but most of us would like to lose part of it.

Since self-help is the solution of the depression, why doesn't Congress pass a law reviving bootstraps?

CHAPTER THIRTY-FIVE

Clark came up to Patricia at once, explained that Julian had telephoned. Something had held him up in town. He would be late. Patricia had longed for Julian earlier. Now, with Clark, at her side, his absence seemed less important. She glanced at Marthe. Marthe glanced reflectively at her.

"Have you been having a good time?" asked Clark at her elbow. "Miss March has been giving me a very good time," said Patricia clearly. "I've loved every minute of it."

Her eyes and Marthe's eyes held. The gauntlet had been flung. It was to be war to the knife.

Julian arrived with dessert and coffee. He did not bother to change. Still in his dusty clothes from the city, he came to the table while his bags went upstairs. Patricia regarded him anxiously. No plate had been laid for him. That made no difference to Julian. After greeting them all, after pausing for a special word with Mrs. Tracy—he was a favorite of hers—he admitted, unashamed and unapologetically, that he had not dined.

"I should have dined in town. Somehow, I didn't get around to it. I know I'm scandalously late but even if I'm late I'm hungry."

"Will you start with soup?" asked Mrs. Tracy, smiling, arranging that a plate be brought for him.

"Is it cold?"

"It's cold."

"Then, I'll start with soup," he announced, dropping to his chair and adding, "Gosh, I'm hot." After a survey of the table where conversation had necessarily been halted by his arrival, he said, "Women have all the best of it in weather like this. You girls look cool enough."

"Would you like to take off your coat?" inquired Marthe sweetly.

"I might do that," he said thoughtfully. A flash of appreciation lighted the table. Julian Haverholt kept on his coat. But, had he really desired to dine in his shirt-sleeves, everyone knew that he would have done so. Patricia, puzzled, saw that they liked him for that. She envied him his courage and his conceit. Julian believed that under any circumstances he would be a welcome addition to any party. The girl saw that he was welcome. He became instantly the center of every group to which he lent his presence. Everyone seemed willing to have it so. Everyone, perhaps, except Clark.

Clark finished his coffee, shoved back his chair, said rather brusquely, "It's cooler on the verandah, I think. We might adjourn there."

His mother sent him a reproachful glance.

"Mr. Haverholt isn't ready, son." "Don't bother about me," said Haverholt, generously. "I'll be all right. That is, if you, Mrs. Tracy will stay to keep me company."

She would.

The others drifted away and left those two talking and laughing at the long, empty, candle-lighted table. Someone turned on the radio. Others rolled back the rug. Instantly, the group on the verandah was dancing. Patricia was in Clark Tracy's arms. Bending his hands, some, fair head he said in a low deliberate voice:

"I have been waiting for this all day."

Patricia glanced up. The

"I knew you would dance like this," he said.

flippant retort died on her lips. She said nothing at all. Her slipped feet moved in unison with his feet, her heart was pressed close to his heart, her hair was brushing his cheek. The sweet smooth music seemed to have spun a world of magic, a world where they were quite alone.

"I knew you would dance like this," he said.

"How do you know?" asked Patricia.

"There were a thousand ways in which to stop him, a thousand reasons why she should. Instead she smiled deliberately into his fascinated eyes. Deliberately she borrowed a page from Julian Haverholt's book. Tonight she would do as she pleased. Tonight was hers. Her eyes welled with mysterious lights, shining and brilliant in her small flushed face. Clark touched his cheek to her blazing hair.

"You are lovely," he whispered. "Am I?" she murmured.

"The most beautiful woman I have ever seen..."

They finished the dance in silence. They stood for a moment and then Patricia dropped her arms.

"The music is over," she said and laughed.

She was intoxicated with her own triumph. It was as if Clark's eyes had made her conscious of her beauty and her power. She was a thousand miles removed from the wretched girl of the afternoon. The others did not matter now. This moment mattered. Whatever happened, for this moment all of Clark's thoughts were for her. The others, let them watch, let them speculate, let them make such inferences as they chose, Patricia did not care.

"More music," called Clark to the group which had gathered at the radio. "Patricia and I want to dance."

There was more music. They danced again. Clark should be dan-ing with Marthe. That only made Patricia's triumph sweeter. Let Marthe suffer as she had suffered. Let Marthe March learn that sometimes all girls were equal.

"Break," said Philip Gove, popping up at Clark's elbow, a glint of determination in his eye.

"No," said Clark.

"Yes," said Phil.

"Let Patricia decide," they both said simultaneously.

"I think," hesitated Patricia, "I think I had better dance with Phil."

Clark surrendered reluctantly. Patricia saw his reluctance, thrilled to it. Phil saw too. As he whirled off with the girl, he muttered something beneath his breath.

"I didn't hear you, Phil," said Patricia sweetly.

"Maybe, you weren't meant to hear."

"Go on, what did you say?"

"Nothing only—" He looked at her with much embarrassment. He said, "It's none of my business, really, but they're all talking."

"About what?" she queried.

Her red lips curved. Her eyes were wide and innocent. Phil had been a willing victim to her spell from the moment he first had glimpsed her. Nothing could make him criticize this bewitching girl.

"About what, Phil?"

"If you don't know, Patricia, I won't tell you," he replied stubbornly. Still he could not resist adding, "It's all Clark's fault anyhow."

"What is Clark's fault?"

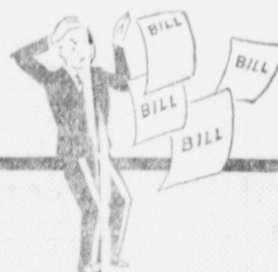

How she loved to say that name. How she loved to discuss this situation. Phil did not like it. He looked really unhappy.

He muttered, "It isn't very pleasant for Marthe."

"No?" said Patricia. She continued serenely, "I guess Marthe can take care of herself."

"I've spent too much money on fuel this year... Starting January 1st I'm switching to

WHEN your laundry bill is too high, you change laundries. When your food bill is too high, you buy more carefully. If you've been spending more than is necessary for fuel, why not change over to another fuel that saves money when you buy it and as you burn it? Koppers Coke!

Right this minute, hundreds of people around here are keeping houses warm and pocketbooks content with thrifty heat. That's the favorite name for this modern fuel that leaves fewer ashes (because it is almost all pure carbon, and carbon burns up); that is cleaner, lighter, easier to handle; that belongs in 1934 fuel-bins!

Give your family and yourself happy New Year heatings! Resolve to burn Koppers Coke—for the sake of your furnace, your budget, and the comfort of all in the house!

MUSICAL RECITAL TO BE PRESENTED HERE FOR THE TRAVEL CLUB

Program Will Be Followed By Social Hour, On Friday Evening

The Bristol Travel Club home will be the scene of a splendid musical recital, Friday evening, this to be given by the Lester Ensemble, scheduled to appear at eight o'clock.

As pianist the ensemble will present Josef Wissow, who is one of America's outstanding musicians. He has appeared with the Philadelphia Orchestra, the Philharmonic Society of Philadelphia, and the Pennsylvania Symphony Orchestra.

Frank Ogelsby, the tenor, has the voice of a finely sympathetic quality, and sings with notable finish and phrasing. Mr. Ogelsby is a familiar figure in Philadelphia musical events.

Mary Miller Mount is a pianist and accompanist of national repute, who needs no introduction here. Her work with many great operatic stars has been particularly outstanding.

The recital will feature the music of both contemporary composers as well as those of the old school, and a delightful musical treat is in store.

The evening's program will be in charge of the Travel Club president, Mrs. Horace H. Burton. Mrs. Charles McCarron and her committee will be in charge of the social hour. The hostesses will be Mrs. Walter Pitkonka and Mrs. Franklin K. Wills.

HOLLYWOOD, . . . Style innovations for Norma Shearer in "Rip Tide" are so advanced that extras, wearing today's fashions and appearing in a scene with the star, look completely outmoded.

So conspicuous was the effect that Irving Thalberg called Adrian, MGM's noted designer, into conference and issued orders for the style expert to make special "new trend" gowns for 102 feminine extras.

Along with the physical effort of gowning so many atmosphere people, Designer Adrian also faces increased difficulties in keeping his new styles secret.

Every effort has been made to spring the Shearer fashions as a complete surprise when the picture is released. The studio has refused to release costume sketches to fashion and fan magazines and has banned photographs of Miss Shearer in her 1934 wardrobe.

They've even closed the sets to keep curious visitors from getting a preview and possibly giving the ideas away to a competitor.

Fireworks have been predicted ever since Lilyan Tashman and Hedda Hopper got into that style row, but here is how they actually met.

Hedda went to Travis Banton's cocktail party with her tall and handsome son, Bill. Lilyan took one look at him and said:

"Hedda, did you do that?"

As Hedda smiled, Lilyan flipped: "You might know, at your age, that you'd have something you could rent out and make money out of."

Remember Betty Boyd who got married and quit the screen several years ago? Well, romance has cooled and she is back before the camera for a role in "A Modern Hero" at Warners.

Little Patsy Parker is not going back to Washington and leave Bert Wheeler pining. She has decided to stay on in Hollywood and continue her film career. Actually, it is Bert who is saying goodbye. He leaves soon for the East to do a series of personal appearances.

The real rivalry to win Carole Lombard's smiles is between Mack Gray, George Raft's "Bodyguard," and "Cracker" Henderson, ex-man Friday to Jack Oakie. Every morning, when Carole gets to the studio, "Cracker" sees that a cup of coffee gets to her dressing room. As for Mack, or "The Killer," he is only a little less devoted to Carole than he is to George.

"These boys are native wits," says Carole. "What Hollywood male stars need are more straight-men like 'Cracker' and 'The Killer.'"

QUICK GLIMPSES:

Sally Blane and Russ Columbe take peculiar delight in crossing up the gossips. One day they've lost interest in each other and the next they're as thick as ever. Sunday night at the Beverly Wilshire, it was romance. . . . The most thrilled person in the room was Johnny Weissmuller's mother who is seeing the sights with son Tarzan and daughter-in-law Lupe. . . . The diners were craning to get a close look at Sharon Lynne's saucy Parisian hat. . . . Joe E. Brown's 17-year-old son is showing interest in Mary Cobb. . . . Sunday a day of many parties. Bebe Daniels, Mrs. Skeets Gallagher, Verna Chalif, Lois Pantages greeted visitors to their new shops in Westwood. . . . The John Lodges (Francesca Braggiotti) entertained a cosmopolitan gathering—part Hollywood, part society and part musical world. . . . Ida Lupino's father, Stanley Lupino, has just been made the head of a British film company. But Ida will stay on in Hollywood. . . . George Thorne, one of Hollywood's most popular publicity men, leaves Warners to join the MGM exploitation department. . . . And Sylvia Sidney has batted her hair for "Good Dame." It's only the third time in her life.

DID YOU KNOW—That Jeanette MacDonald has collected dozens of tiny orchestras, complete in detail and fashioned from china, wood, cloth, metals and various other materials?

ATTENTION CAR OWNERS!

The New Automobile Law

Pennsylvania's new Financial Responsibility Act becomes effective January 1, 1934. It makes financial responsibility a legally necessary qualification for the privilege of owning or driving a motor vehicle.

A motorist will be given 15 days in which to satisfy a court judgment against him following an accident in which someone is injured or resulting in property damage in excess of $200. If the motorist fails to satisfy the judgment within the time limits, his owner's or operator's license will be suspended until, first, the judgment has been satisfied and, second, he provides evidence of financial responsibility to take care of possible future judgments.

Financial responsibility must be provided, under penalty of license revocation, if the owner or operator is involved in two or more accidents (within or without the State) in one year (retroactive to January 1, 1933) causing personal injury or property damage totaling $200.

Applicants for 1934 licenses will be required to furnish their accident records for the year 1933.

A false accident record will result in revocation of license for two years, at the end of which time proof of financial responsibility must be furnished before license will be issued.

How To Prove Financial Responsibility

The motorist has a choice of three methods by which he may prove his financial ability to satisfy judgments rendered against him:

1. A cash deposit of $11,000 with the Secretary of Revenue.
2. A Bond for $11,000 issued either by a surety company authorized to do business in Pennsylvania, or by individuals, each owning unencumbered real estate in the required amount.
3. Public Liability insurance with a minimum coverage of $5,000 for injury to one person, and $10,000 for injury to more than one person in a single accident; in addition, Property Damage insurance with coverage of at least $1000 is also required.

This needed legislation says in effect: "No one is to be permitted to drive a car unless he is able to pay for any damage he might cause." Obviously, the easiest and most economical course for every motorist is to carry Public Liability and Property Damage insurance.

HAWKS WIN FOURTH CONSECUTIVE GAME

Winning their fourth consecutive game, the Hawks eked out a close victory over the Odd Fellows last night in a Bristol Basketball League match. Final score read: Hawks, 27; Odd Fellows, 26.

The "Oddies" gave the winners plenty of opposition and led for three-fourths of the tilt but weakened in the early part of the last quarter to allow the Hawks to take a commanding lead and finish the game in front.

The Black and White team from Radcliffe street did not give up even though the Hawks possessed a five-point lead in the final three minutes and staged a spree in the remaining moments of the fray to roll in four points.

With thirty-seconds to play, several Odd Fellows passed up opportunities to take long shots or dribble up the floor and take a chance on being fouled. Instead of this they would wait for an opening which never came as the boys of Harry Jenks were covering their players pretty well.

The star of the winning combination only scored one field goal but was responsible for the winning tally. Ray Dorsey colored flash of the Hawks, was continually breaking up the Oddies' plays and after receiving the leather would pass to Kendig to enable this player to score four double-deckers in the second half. Several of Kendig's shots were made from difficult angles of the wooden way.

The Odd Fellows were quick in taking a lead in the first quarter. Britton opened by sinking a foul. After still missed a try from the fifteen foot mark, Britton added another tally. Still sunk in a field goal and was fouled. He made the try and the score read 5-0. Kendig made the first field goal for the Hawks, scoring from side court. Hibbs took a pass from Britton to score for the Oddies. Dugan missed a foul but followed up to score a twin-pointer, making the count read 7-4 as the first quarter came to an end.

Jones missed a foul for the Odd Fellows but still took a pass from Jones to score. Still followed up on Hibbs' foul miss and made the goal to bring the score to 11-4. Dugan was fouled by Dietrich but missed. Jones was charging and Flatich was given a free try only to miss the basket. Dugan received a pass from Cole to score for the Hawks and Massilla added another point when the half ended with the totals, 11-7.

Dietrich opened the third session with a long shot. Cole scored for the ultimate winners, making the score, 13-9. Kendig scored on a pass from Dorsey and was fouled. The try was not converted. Hibbs was given two tries from the foul mark and was successful once. Still added another foul. When Jones hit the cords with a free try the score stood 16-11. Massilla missed a try for the Hawks but Dorsey backed up the throw and shot a one-handed throw into the cords. Dorsey passed to Kendig to add another double-decker. Cole put the Gray and Black into the lead for the first time with a score from under the basket. Hibbs scored a sleeper for the Odd Fellows and again the Radcliffe street boys were in the lead, 18-17. Jones scored another point for the Black and White but Dorsey bounced the sphere to Kendig and again the Hawks' forward scored, tying the count. Jones put the Odd Fellows into the front 21-19 with a double-decker as the third quarter came to a close.

A triple pass, Dorsey to Kendig to Massilla deadlocked the count at the beginning of the final canto. Dugan put the Hawks into the lead with a long shot. Dorsey to the same forward Kendig, and the Hawks were four points to the good. Britton and Dietrich missed fouls. Dugan took another long shot to score for the Hawks, leaving the count, 27-21. Jones was fouled and converted the try. Hibbs scored a "sleeper" for the Odd Fellows. Britton missed two foul throws but Dietrich scored a twin-pointer as "Doc" Potts pulled the trigger on the gun, ending the match with the score 27-26.

CAUM-SNELSON

FALLSINGTON, Dec. 27—Miss Doris Grace Snelson, Morrisville, and Edward Leonard Caum, Lancaster, were married December 22nd, in the Church of the Incarnation, Morrisville, by the Rev. Francis H. Smith, rector of All Saints' P. E. Church, Fallsington. The bride was attended by Miss Margaret White, as maid of honor, while Mr. Caum's best man was Sidney Snelson, a brother of the bride. The honeymoon will be spent in New York state. Upon their return Mr. and Mrs. Caum will reside in Morrisville. Mr. Caum is principal of the high school in Morrisville, and has been a member of the high school faculty for a number of years.

INEXPENSIVE SESSION

Harrisburg, Dec. 27—A study in figures today revealed that the special session of the Legislature which ended last Thursday, after a six weeks' existence, really was a "short and inexpensive one." It cost, exclusive of the printing bill, more than 50 per cent less than either of the two previous extraordinary sessions during the present administration.

POLICE CAPTAIN KILLED

Scranton, Dec. 27—Gunfire cracked the silence of the early morning and when the smoke of the battle cleared, a police captain and a suspected robber, wanted in several cities for burglary, lay dead. Arthur Glason, Scranton police captain, died from a bullet wound in the abdomen. John J. Herbenor, 34, robber suspect, fell from a bullet wound under the heart. Herbenor attempted to escape from a hotel, the scene of the gun battle, by a fire escape. Mortally wounded, he plunged two stories, landing in the snow on the roof of the first floor.

TORRESDALE MANOR

Torresdale Manor folks held their Christmas festival at seven o'clock, Sunday evening. Santa Claus was driven around the manor by George Knoll, in an automobile, to let the little folks know that he had arrived. Residents gathered around the Christmas tree, that has been placed in a field opposite State Road, and sang carols. Miss Ethel Hartman played the trumpet, Miss Dorothea Wenner, horn, and Robert Demberg, violin. Santa Claus talked to the children and distributed gifts. George Knoll thanked the people on behalf of the Torresdale Manor Improvement Association for generous donations and co-operation.

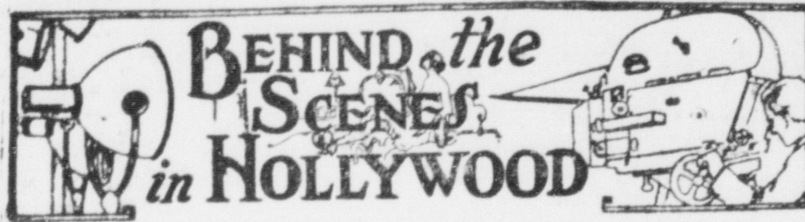

Frederick Hare, bankers, N. Y., spent the Christmas week-end with his daughter, Mrs. Lester Engle.

Mrs. Emma Knoll, Elkins Park, week-ended with Mr. and Mrs. George Knoll.

Mrs. W. J. White, Harding, N. J., was a week-end guest of her daughter, Mrs. Francis Rossbauer.

Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Carr entertained on Sunday Mr. and Mrs. Walter Harper, Maple Shade, N. J.

Mr. and Mrs. William Carver, Washington street, spent Christmas Day visiting friends in Burlington, N. J.

HOLLYWOOD. —Some celebrities write diaries, others authorize biographies, but Rudy Vallee plans to leave a motion picture record of his life.

At least the crooner is now busily engaged in shooting Hollywood scenes to add to the reels he already has collected. These reels go back as far as Rudy's first trip to the movies. At a cost of $800, he had his entire picture, "The Vagabond Lover," reduced from a standard to a 16 millimeter film.

He also has engaged a man to shoot scenes when he is working on the film version of George White's "Scandals" for Fox.

Some of the Vallee celluloid biography is in color. There are scenes, for instance, from the megaphone star's vacations at Kesar Lake in the Maine woods.

As for the women in the crooner's life—well, Alice Faye is represented by considerable footage.

The Sandra Shaw-Gary Cooper honeymoon will be the best-chaperoned on record. First, the bride's parents accompanied the newlyweds to Arizona and now Judge and Mrs. Cooper have left to join them. But everyone will be in Hollywood in time for Christmas dinner.

Always the best of friends, the Herbert Marshalls and the William O'Bryans are planning a novel Christmas celebration. Marshall is in Hollywood appearing with Norma Shearer in "Riptide," and his wife, Edna Best, is in London with the baby. The O'Bryans are separated the same way, only he is in London and Elizabeth Allen is in Hollywood.

Consequently the two couples will console each other on Christmas afternoon, the big feature of the celebration being a long distance telephone conversation to their spouses, and with special time for Marshall to listen to the baby.

One of the most unusual of the holiday parties will be given by Sally Rand for all of the boys who have appeared with her in vaudeville. The guests include the three Crosby brothers (no kin to Bing and Everett), Sally's brother, Harold, Harvey, Karles (Sally's former dance partner), Harold Prendergast, Red Hudson, Sam Brown, Perry Mansfield and Perk Lazell.

At one time, Sally traveled in an act with 12 boys. It was then she originated the fan dance which you'll see—if the censors aren't too mean—in Paramount's "Bolero."

Cameras and lights will be taken to Joan Blondell's house to make the final scene for "I've Got Your Number." This was the only shot left when doctors sent Joan to the hospital for an appendicitis operation. Warners' asked Dr. Louis Regan if the star could come to the studio but he vetoed it for several weeks. As the script merely calls for a closeup of Joan and Pat O'Brien doing a clinch at her bedside in a hospital, the company decided to take the studio to the star.

QUICK GLIMPSES: The secret is out. Buster Crabbe is taking daily boxing lessons, so he can get a chance at a big role in Mae West's new picture, "It Ain't No Sin." One of the principal characters is a boxer. . . . Most of Kay Francis' friends were that surprised over the story of her separation.

When she left here, she said it was to spend Christmas with Kenneth McKeena in New York. . . . You've heard, of course, about the feud between Ricardo Cortez and Al Jolson. Well, one of the gifts Ric got at his pre-wedding shower, was a ham in black-face. . . . Next year, Wallie Beery won't be so particular about having a tremendous Christmas tree brought in from the mountains. He spent six nights decorating it and was only half through. . . . The movie-patrons of a Stamford (Conn.) theatre got the thrill of their lives last night when they saw a regular Hollywood sneak preview of "Four Frightened People." Cecil B. De Mille is in the East and had the film shipped to him.

of big powers with executive powers, the Assembly merely ratifying. Study of the Fascist Grand Council's Language has caused the defenders of the League to pause over the word "objectives" rather longer than over any other word in the laconic message. It is well-known that Mussolini believes that Europe would best occupy itself reforming the peace treaties which in his view hold it bound and that real peace can only come to Europe by a complete revision. They know this is a direct reference to their efforts to use the League of Nations to perpetuate the treaties as written and the frontiers they lay down. France and the countries of the Little Entente consider themselves attacked and mean to defend themselves.

Mrs. Carrie Headley and Miss Gertrude Pope, Wood and Washington streets, spent Christmas Day with Mrs. Headley's sister, Mrs. Anna Rue, Trenton.

The Matterhorn of the Mat

By BURNLEY

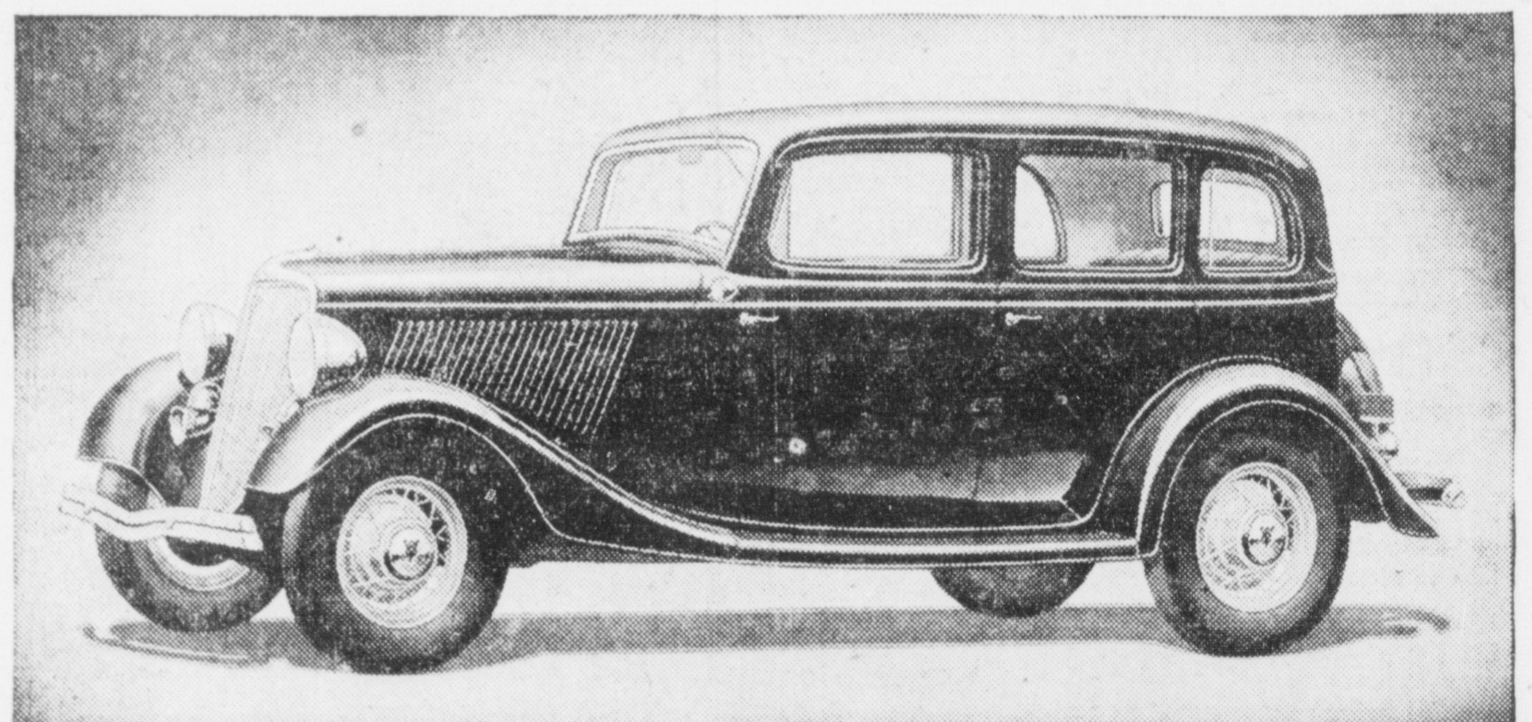

THERE have been an inordinate number of freaks usurping the limelight in the somewhat malodorous history of "rassling," but according to Jack Curley, and he should know, Man Mountain Dean tops them all. In case you haven't heard of the Man Mountain—or even if you have—Curley will tell you about him. But first of all you must understand that the Man Mountain hides behind a beard of the King Henry VIII variety, which makes him look like a cross between that rather goofy monarch and Russia's mad monk, Raspoutine. He weighs 320 pounds, is 6 feet 10 inches high in his bare tootsies—and what tootsies they are! This bearded giant is supposed to have been born in Georgia, and according to the press agent's story, his real name is Frank Stone Mountain Dean. His old man is said to have named him Stone Mountain because he was born high on the side of that famous Georgian peak. However, from other sources I have heard that this big oaf used to be a fifth-rate boxer a decade or so ago—before he grew all the facial foliage—and under another name, of course. Anyway, this Raspoutine created quite a sensation when he made his mat debut in the East some months ago. He may not be much of a grappler, but he certainly is a comical guy to watch. One of the funniest things in the hilarious history of wrestling occurred a few weeks ago in Newark when the Mountaneous One was rassing a Hungarian yclept Sandor Szabo. The bewhiskered Dean picked up his opponent and proceeded to hurt him out of the ring. As Szabo was taking off, he grabbed the 300-pound mountain by the beard and pulled him from the platform with him. Thus Dean made a clean sweep of the ring, throwing himself as well as his opponent!

A Real Advance in Motor Car Engineering

De Luxe Fordor Sedan. One of eleven handsome new body types, all with V-8 cylinder motor

New Dual Carburetion and Dual Intake Manifold add to power and economy of the New Ford V-8 for 1934

LIKE a pair of lungs for this powerful motor, this new system of carburetion and intake supplies vaporized gasoline evenly to all eight cylinders. Two distinct advantages result from it:

1. More even compression of fuel, giving still greater power, faster acceleration, quicker starting and smoother performance in cold weather.

2. More complete utilization of fuel, more miles to the gallon of gasoline, with consequent economy. Crankcase dilution is reduced to a minimum, thereby conserving oil with still further economy in operation.

Increased efficiency at less cost is a notable achievement. Yet it is only one of many improvements which distinguish this new and greater Ford V-8 for 1934.

Clear-vision Ventilation. Constant Supply of Fresh Air without Drafts or Obstruction to View

As perfected in the New Ford, this system of ventilation operates efficiently at all speeds, winter or summer.

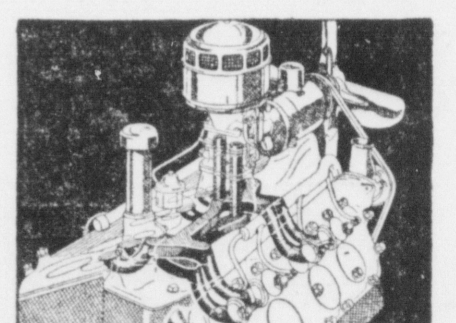

In cold or stormy weather, the new adjustable window ventilators can be opened the desired amount to provide fresh air. Individual control on front door and rear-quarter windows enables passengers to obtain desired ventilation without causing discomfort to others. Windshield and windows do not fog when ventilators are opened.

In warm weather, the windshield—which opens—and the cowl ventilator provide additional fresh air.
